Broward League of Cities announces 2011 scholarship and student ambassador program

> Posted by wst123 on December 27, 2010 at 12:40 PM

The Broward League of Cities is now accepting applications for the inaugural year of the Student Ambassador Program.

Offered to high school juniors who are residents of Broward County and attending any Broward public or charter school, the program will provide four students who plan to pursue a career in public administration, political science or other government-related field with firsthand insight into public service.

The four selected students will represent their high schools at Broward League of Cities general membership and board of directors meetings and other functions, starting in February.

The organization is also accepting applications for the Scholarship for Government Studies, a $1,000 college scholarship which is awarded to four students from across Broward County who plan to pursue an education in government studies, political science or other government-related field.
